The text describes the pronunciation of letters in a specific script. It lists various symbols and their corresponding pronunciations: * A letter pronounced from the tongue and the inner edges of both front-upper teeth. * Another symbol pronounced from the edge of the upper front teeth and the wet part of the lower lip. * A third symbol is pronounced from the wet part of both lips. * Yet another symbol is spoken by rounding both lips. Additionally, it contains a series of consonants and vowels (-), which seem to be written in the same script. These include ADA, I, IDAH, ʾA, ʾIDAH, U, F, S, N, T, H, W, C, R. The text also mentions a phrase or name: "‘Alayh", which means "upon him" in Arabic. It is presented by someone named "ʾIbn al-Nahhas" and translated into English by another person, also named "Ibn al-Nahhas".
